The fund for the new building for the Railroad Young Men's Christian Association is steadily growing to the desired amount of $45,600, as is shown by its reports presented at the noonday luncheon yesterday.

Just as the campaign workers were seating themselves about the tables, President Stevens, of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, entered the rount and with him was a distinguished-looking man, who proved to be excepted from the compaign workers were charman Duke called on him for a speech, and he responded in a happy vein. His remarks were bright and full of humor, as of good sound sense. He said:

"For some months every time I have come to Richmond I have seen that building down by the Chesapeake and Ohio Depot nailed up, and whenever a friend has asked what that condition of affairs meant, I have changed the subject of conversation. For I know that that is not the way Richmond usually does things. It is the only time I ever knew a building in Richmond, intended for any beneficient purpose, to be nailed before it was completed. And I do not believe this city is going to leave this building to leave this building to leave this building."

West Virginia Looks to Richmond. "I say it most affectionately that west Virginia is a daughter, of Old Virginia—God bless her—but we do not nail up our railroad association buildings out there. We have three buildings out city. Some may point to other citles of the South as examples of enterprise and progress, but we of West Virginia look to Richmond as the city that furnishes us inspiration for whatevering goes to make a city what it ought to be.

Before taking his seat Governor MacCorkle made a liberal subscription to the building fund.

Mr. Jellison's Fine Report.

When the reports were presented there was at first a slight feeling of disappointment, as some of the amounts were rather small, but the spirits of all the workers rose when Mr. Jellison, of the railroad men, reported that his team had secured with prolonged applause. This puts his team along way in the lead, as it has raised more than four times as much as any of the other teams. Mr. Jellison stated that of this amount the Carnegie Steel Company, of Pittsburg, had given $500, the Union Spring Company, of the same city, $300, the Standard Steel Car Company, of New York, $500, the Lynchburg Colliery Company of Lynchburg, $100, and the Island Creek Coal Sales Company, of Philadelphia, $100, making $1,5000 secured by his team from outside the city.
